

In English this week, we began a new text-based unit using Cressida Cowell's 'How to be a Viking'. We read through the book and explored the lessons learnt by the main character, Hiccup. Next week, we will think about our own fears and produce some writing based on this.

In Maths, we have started our addition and subtraction unit by adding and subtracting hundreds. Next week, we will be adding hundreds and tens then moving on to hundreds and ones.

In RESPECT, we discussed personal boundaries and what this means for us, including when we are online. In History, we completed our work on why Alfred is known as 'Alfred the Great' and also studied different Viking gods. Next week, we will be finishing this unit of work by completing Viking artwork.

We would like to remind parents that the first set of Year 3 statutory words will be tested shortly. These are listed below and were also stuck in homework diaries in September.
