In English this week, we continued to look at recount writing. Last week, we looked at examples of recounts and the features of recounts (first person, past tense, chronological order and time openers). This week, we started to plan our own version of a recount and we could all choose our experience to talk about. Some people chose our Eureka trip, some chose a memorable experience and some chose an exciting day or part of a holiday.

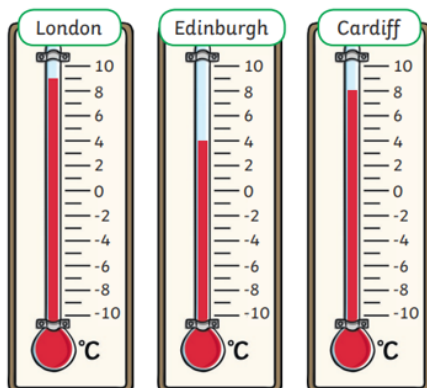

In Maths, we rounded off our work on reading scales by reading the different measurements of temperature, capacity, mass and length. We then compared some of the measurements to decide which were greater than, less than and equal to.
